No-fault insurance has been instituted in almost every state. The benefits to consumers are usually touted in terms of lower premiums and increased financial security. The objective of this study was to determine whether no-fault insurance improves the lives of a segment of the population. It was hypothesized that certain groups of individuals do better with no-fault insurance than with other types of insurance. In the absence of randomized studies, a retrospective study was performed to determine whether certain medical conditions, vehicle factors, and demographic factors are more prevalent among individuals with no-fault insurance. A retrospective chart review was conducted. All completed insurance claims over a 3-year period in which the status for no-fault insurance was indicated were reviewed. Those with no-fault insurance were compared with those with other types of insurance. A total of 5,567 completed insurance claims were reviewed; 3,503 had no-fault insurance and 1,964 had other types of insurance. Of the no-fault group, 46% had no medical conditions, 52% owned a motor vehicle, and 37% had a nonoccup

Q: How to delete EAV attributes with MySQL I have a database table with several thousand rows of data. The data is grouped by a bunch of different attributes. The problem is that some of these attributes are EAV attributes, meaning that multiple values can be attached to a row. Unfortunately I can't change that design because it was done by a third party with whom I am no longer in contact. Now, I'd like to have all the attributes with values that aren't null set to NULL. There are a bunch of different EAV attributes and I can't figure out a good way to determine the value. It seems like the only way would be to make a query like this: DELETE a.*, (SELECT GROUP_CONCAT(value) FROM eav_attribute e WHERE e.attribute_id=a.attribute_id AND e.entity_type_id=4 AND e.attribute_code=a.attribute_code AND e.attribute_id NOT IN (49
