Retired Men's Nude Beach Volleyball League was developed by Beer Nuts Coffee, a gaming studio based out of Los Angeles. We began this project almost two years ago in our spare time while trying to improve the quality of our port side naked vigals. We wanted to create a game that was simplistic, focused, and honest without sacrificing high quality. The only asset we used was a lack of experience in video games. We didn't know the ropes at all. We sort of just took a lot of different video games, how to pieces and worked on them. Slowly but surely we improved the whole experience, leveled up our own strengths, and continuously improved the ease of use, game play and difficulty. We made the game into two different modes, one that involves simple single player gameplay and one that requires a buddy system. The companion mode enables users to enter the game with a friend, play cooperatively, and eventually challenge each other to a final battle. The game is set up to have a lot of replay value, but we are also trying to sell a "tournament" feature to allow users to play with friends and challenge each other to a duel on the beach. Retired Men's Nude Beach Volleyball League is a silly game with a title I love to tell people, but it's also a very touching and human story just beneath the surface." What's new:

is attempting to get into the marketplace for private city creation again in 2016 with an entirely new platform that they hope will succeed where other such tools have failed. Their website is full of promises and analytics features that they are designed to gather to track and market the alpha city consumption of the planned A-series of Massively Multiplayer Game City Creation Tools. We generally feel no urge to subscribe to free access to their website, but if you are really interested, the email "gamecity" on their main page will let you know their plans and then you can try the public alpha version of their tool. The CEO is father of the online open city tool, which we wrote about in early 21st Century. That little tool, which they licensed from son, is still being used and developed to this day and their short-term goal is to have big companies buy their license and be able to import one city at a time... - Smaller cities distributed in a market area

Massively Multiplayer: These are cities that multiple players can simultaneously own. Launching in late 2016 as I detail above is a new game called Life Game One Life, set partly in a realistic US tech city, a few years in the future. We have our own domain, gameroomau.com, set by a background artist to project a similarly-themed region after BioShock is done with Bioshock Infinite. We have applied to be a Games and Gameways sponsor and let us know that we might appear on the TV screen or website, leading with our press release, and our full announcement and distribution. We received immediate approval to be and we are nearing release to Google Play and the Apple Store store and we plan to announce again then. We are building a community of editors and news and reviews who have come and are willing to help us promote our announcement and release to as many gamers and gameways as possible. If you are a games and gameways editor who would like to help us promote and gain awareness of our announcement and release, please contact me at gamenightau@gmail.com You can reach me on Twitter @jamesgameroomau, so that we can exchange signals of interest, let me know if anything interests you or if you have ideas on how to create wonderful public awareness for this project so that we can do well at telling gameways to cover us. I can also thank Mrs. Nancy Gameroomau (wife) for her help with all this, and she has texted and emailed us
